POETRY
TRANSFORMATION.
Love, we have stopped late humble bread
Into the stars' name-bubbling
We've knelt before the Moon's white face
White' round us whirled Night's purple wings.
Love, we have trod the floors of Moon.
And watched Dawn's reeling galleons die.
The sunset's panoramic hills—
Love, we have known them, you know.
Upon the battlements of Time
We stood and heard Life's thunders roar;
A million jinking years that swelled
To crashing notes of millions more.
Our hearts have germinated sweet
To beauty through each golden hour;
But now the bloom-time days are past,
The stalk is fading with the flower.
And we shall seek earth's simple things;
A rooster small, a green-fleeced hen—
Come, love, and lay your cherished dreams
Beneath the touch of my desire.
We could not climb the Infinite,
The jagged heights were steep and lone;
For us child-wistfulness and sleep—
Old twilight memories and song.
Love, is it here that we shall wend,
Down honest paths, grown gently wise?
Perhaps our eyes, made glad of earth,
Shall find the key to Paradise.
—J. Corson Miller, in the New York Times.

HUMOR OF THE DAY
"Your wife evidently has a will of her own, old chap."
"Yea, and I am the sole beneficiary."
Furrier—Yes, sir; furs have increased in price.
"Mr. Jones—suppose because it cost the animals so much more to live—Judge."
"Now that you have heard my daughter, where would you advise her to go to take a holiday?"
"Any thin, thinly populated district"—London Opinion.
Supt.—Please, I'd like to marry your daughter.
Father—But can you support her in the manner in which her favorite screen heroine is accustomed to live?—Life.
"There is one good thing about this vers libre."
"Whats that?"
"Nobody has tried to set any of it to a popular song."—Kansas City Journal.
"There's a bright side to everything."
"Which?"
"Certainly. Think of the cases of indigestion they have cured."—Boston Transcript.
Church—I see that more than 25,000,000 tons of ice is manufactured annually in the United States.
Gotham—Well, there are other reasons for considering this a cold world.
—Yonkers Statesman.
"I told the sergeant of this morning, I told him of well."
"Who did?"
"Ah, I did."
"And what did he say?"
"Nothing. He didn't hear me."—Coram.
"Will you come and make a four at bridge, sir?"
"Im exceedingly sorry, sir, but I don't play bridge."
"Then what the devil did you join a golf club for?"—Tatler.
"We get some unexpected rewards now and then."
"Whats now?"
"Four years I advocated good roads on account of farmers, and now I find a lot of motorists are supporting me."—Louisville Courier Journal.

JITNEY INSURANCE TO PROTECT PUBLIC

Considerable anxiety has been felt by the hundreds of drivers of motor vehicles throughout the state regarding the official interpretation of the law governing the minimum amount of insurance that must be carried by operators of public service vehicles. Dozens of letters have been received by Robbins R. Stockell, state commissioner of motor vehicles, who has now received an opinion from Attorney General Frank H. Easley that "the manifest purpose of this statute is to give the public the greatest possible protection within the specified amount of insurance required by the statute."
In his opinion the attorney general says: "The manifest purpose of this statute is to give the public the greatest possible protection within the specified amount of insurance required by the statute."
"Practically all the insurance companies issue a standard form of policy to cover this class of insurance. The minimum amount for which these policies are issued is $5,000 for a personal limit and $10,000 for a collective limit, where more than one person is injured. To make the personal limit in these insurance policies greater than $5,000 would be an unjust discrimination in favor of a single person injured, to the exclusion of the recovery of damages under said policies by other persons injured in the same accident.
"As the statute bases the increased insurance to be carried by owners or operators of public service vehicles on the seating capacity of the vehicle operated, it can be conclusively presumed that the legislature intended to give protection in the largest possible measure to all persons using these vehicles for public conveyance.
"it is therefore my opinion that where the word 'minimum' occurs in 'minimum policy' as used in the statute it should be construed to mean the 'collective limit' instead of the 'personal limit' as used in said policies, and any policy having a personal limit of $5,000 and a collective limit as large or larger than the amount required by the statute meets with the requirements of the law."

BATTLEFIELD TROPHIES IN BOSTON STORE WINDOW

In one of the windows of the Boston store appears a patriotic exhibit which has been attractively arranged by Morgan Cronin in the interest of the big indoor fair and bazaar which opens this (Saturday) evening in the other armory on McKinley avenue under the auspices of the R. O. Fletcher post, American Legion, the local camp of Spanish War Veterans and the two local companies of the state guard. War trophies from the battlefields of France appear in the window display, these are trophies which are greatly prized by their owners, have been looted by a number of local men who saw active service. In the exhibit are a German helmet, a German luger, a 105 French shell, 75 French shell, pieces of shrapnel, souvenirs made by German prisoners of war in allied camps, war maps, foreign money and coins and many other relics.
The decorators have been busy at the armory, which has been converted into a veritable fairyland, and the executive committee in charge of the bazaar are looking for a record-breaking crowd at the armory tonight.

AT DAVIS THEATRE

The Better 'Ole.
A good sized audience at the Davis theatre Friday night laughed heartily with Charles Dalton as he played 'Old Bill,' the leading role in the humorous interest story of 'The Better 'Ole,' from the book written by Capt. Bruce Bairnsfather and Capt. Arthur Elliott with British army life in the recent world war as its setting.
Harry Allen as Bert, the amorous dispenser of identification disks as love tokens wherever he meets a girl along the way, and Percy Jennings as Alf, with his pay-tenn lighter, that never lights, admirably made up the other two-thirds of 'The Three Musketeers' of 1914-1915.
The clever characterization by Mr. Dalton was well matched by Mr. Allen and Mr. Jennings in the scenes that ran all the way up to the front line trenches, and back to England, they win be the heroism of 'Ole
